DON'T PEE ON YOUR LEG

Jellyfish Squish
$10

No one here at Transworld SURF was willing to submit to a jellyfish sting to test this product, so we have to just trust that it works. On the bottle it says it offers "immediate and complete relief from pain and itching associated with jellyfish stings." We hope we don't have to try it any time soon, but just in case, we're bringing it to the beach, that way we don't have to pee on each other like the old days. Man, I'm gonna miss the old days.

ULTRALIGHT BEACH PARTY

Patagonia Lightweight Travel Pack
$70

Even though hikers, bikers, and outdoorsy-type people will be putting a tech backpack like this to its full use, don't be afraid to make it a permanent part of your summer beach-going collection. First off, at 11.6 ounces it's lighter than your towel. But it's tougher than a beaver's tail, too, made of triple-ripstop silicone nylon that's treated with a water-repellant finish. It's a versatile little bugger; it packs down tight so you can throw it in your luggage on a trip and it won't take up any room, or you can simply use it for everyday beach outings.—C.K.

YOU SMELL THAT?

Aquaseal Wetsuit Shampoo and MiraZyme Deodorizer
$8 Deodorizer
$6 Shampo

It's often said that wetsuits are the second most important invention in the history of surfing. Surfboards obviously hold the top spot, but wetsuits might make it an interesting race—if they didn't reek like dead wombat intestines when you leave a wet one in your car on a hot day. Which is where the Aquaseal shampoo and Mira-Zyme deodorizer come in. The shampoo keeps your suit clean and supple, while the deodorizer will keep you from passing out from the infamously pungent rotten-wetsuit smell. Also works well on booties, rash guards, and other gear.—C.K.
